Background

A new academic year often means a new cohort of students. And in a classroom with English language learners (ELLs), this means not only lots of names to remember, but familiarizing students with school facilities and routines, and ascertaining their level of proficiency in English.

That’s where this pack comes in, as it includes resources that can help in a whole number of situations.

Question Student Sheets

The key to understanding is often questioning, and these sheets help students understand the key terms that they can use to deepen their understanding on any given subject.

School Area/Day Flash Cards

When students are not confident in their surroundings or with the language being spoken in class, it can hamper their confidence, and mean they don't shout up when they're not understanding. By using these fun colored batons as indicators, you can reduce the amount of time that this happens, tailor your message to your audience, and ensure everyone is engaging in the lesson. They are so simple, yet effective!

To make the baton, simply roll up the sheet, ensuring that the text is visible.
