

I need to make up a password but I'm not very good at remembering things.

Do you think it would be OK to use my name?

Using your name for a password might make it easy for people to guess what it is and start using it.

Why not mix capital letters and numbers together to make a password?

How often do you think Klara should change her password? Why?